

Next generation farmers are in a tough position these days with the Oregon legislature putting so many harsh, unstudied, and unnecessary limitations and regulations on our way of life. Being self-sustainable through our lifestyle, crops and animals shouldn't be something to be targeted, especially when communities have long spoken up about the positive impacts of easier access to more natural foods. I wholeheartedly support allowing farm stores to be more accessible for our entire community. I support Oregon having access to farm fresh goods through On-Property sales and all farmers/community markets. I ran a market in a rural town and had the chance to hear from customers who were elated to have such access to fresh honey, produce & more.
