Opposition to SB 1583

Chair Prozanski and Members of the Committee,

My name is Princess, and I am a Certified Recovery Mentor and Peer Support Specialist working in Portland. I am writing today to express my strong opposition to SB 1583.

I speak to you not just as a professional, but as someone who has suffered from substance use disorder. I have been in abstinence for three years from fentanyl. My recovery journey began long before those three years, but I was only successful when I finally reached a place that practiced a health-first, trauma-informed harm reduction model. My substance use stemmed from self-medicating, and it was the consistency, trust, and "meeting me where I was" that allowed me to become the housed, gainfully employed, and productive member of the community I am today. I am deeply concerned that SB 1583, by moving oversight and funding toward the Criminal Justice Commission, will move support away from the health-based approach that saved my life. For many in our community, the justice system is a source of trauma, not healing.

As a Peer Support Specialist, I know that consistency and trust are the two most important pillars of recovery. When we move these programs into a "deflection" model governed by criminal justice entities, we risk:

Alienating the most vulnerable: Those suffering from deep-seated trauma are less likely to engage with systems tied to law enforcement.

Breaking trust: Peer support works because it is rooted in mutual understanding, not the threat of legal consequences.

Stigmatizing health issues: Substance use disorder is a health crisis, and it requires a health-based solution.

Moving support away from the health model would be detrimental to the success of my peers and my community. I implore you to vote against moving these resources to a criminal-legal oversight framework and instead keep our focus on the trauma-informed, health-based care that works.

Thank you for your time and for considering the voices of those with lived experience.
Sincerely,

Princess Bendjouya
Certified Recovery Mentor
