I support the 1.25% for wildlife, this will benefit some of the amazing organizations across Oregon such as the Cascade Raptor Center.

Habitat conservation is important for biodiversity preservation, ecosystem services, special survival, protecting threats to habitats and for human wellbeing.

Habitat conservation is important because it demonstrates our commitment to protecting our planet's invaluable natural resources. The allocation of these funds will aid in various conservation efforts, including habitat preservation, species protection, and environmental education. By supporting such initiatives, we can create a sustainable future for both wildlife and future generations.

It plays a crucial role in preserving biodiversity and ensuring the survival of various species. By maintaining and protecting natural habitats, we provide wildlife with the necessary resources to thrive and adapt to environmental changes. Investing in habitat conservation not only supports the well-being of wildlife but also contributes to the health of our ecosystems, benefiting humanity as a whole.

Oregon is known for its wildlife and biodiversity and 300 species are at risk of extinction, with this current administration there is no hope for the future if we do not act.
