I oppose this measure. The amount of surveillance and tracking companies like Tesla, google and flock already do is too much and there is no clear information on what is being tracked, how it is being used, nor a clear way to purge any information that shows where people are nor what they are doing. These always on surveillance systems are not being regulated and no oversight is being brought to bear on how this information is used, shared, nor how long it is kept.

This is yet another case of technology companies using the public and open spaces, roads, sidewalks, and even buildings with windows as the product. Our civil liberties are being eroded and companies with seemingly unlimited funds are gaining more power at the expense of the public and the right to be free of their overreach into public spaces that they, other corporations, and other governmental bodies are already exploiting.

Respectfully,
Jeff Maher
