Geez. The cost of utilities and energy are already bleeding Oregonians dry of their economic wellbeing, and this only would exacerbate an already economic doom loop Oregon finds itself in because of Over regulation and failed forestry policy that lets forests decay and build up fuel for massive forest fires.

Whatever the state has been doing on climate change these last two plus decades is not helping, as the temperature of earth continues warming - maybe even more warm because of climate policies like the state adopts. The manufacture of EVs, for instance, is actually very carbon intensive as opposed to conventional cars.

Ugh - with state legislators like mine who needs enemies!
