SB1541

The invisible hand of capitalism can do good things, but it has no foresight and no conscience. For the common good, it must be guided to act for the benefit of all, not just business shareholders. Businesses often take resources from the commons without conscience or thought of long term consequences. It is only just that they should bear the burden of recycling the waste that they produce. These business costs should not be passed on to future generations or even to the general public of the present generation. Do justice!
