Legislative moves to change the voting date explicitly set by referendum such as this is an act of cowardice and refusal to accept accountability by the supermajority body politic. An attempt to have their cake and eat it too: get oppressive taxes and fees with a low turn-out primary election, then get their sales tax through legislation, as well as gaslight the voters into letting the supermajority keep their seats in legislature. Shame on the supermajority for their unabashed attempts to bilk the voters of their hard-earned money under the guise of budgetary shortfall, when it's their inability to control spending, or perhaps it's their propensity to skim our tax dollars for their own pockets through kickbacks from contract over expenditures and unnecessary regulatory prerequisites.
