I am opposed to changing the date of the vote date of the referendum. I was part of the group that was collecting signatures for the November election. I did not collect over 200 signatures just to have the democrats change what we signed up for. How dare the democrats feel they have the right to move the goalposts, to keep playing games because they're scared of the repercussions of their actions. The dems knew the tax was historically unpopular yet they voted for it anyway and now they're too scared to stand by their decision in the November election when they're up for reelection. If you're too scared to stand by your vote maybe you have no business being in politics.

Again, I am OPPOSED to have the referendum moved from the November election to the primary in may.
