Although there are very positive aspects to this bill by strengthening sibling bonds, increased rights, and protecting personal possessions and memories, which is all good for foster children, I am wondering where the state plans on getting the staffing and money to be able to perform all that this bill requires?

IF the state would stop the sanctuary status program which is appreciated by only 2-3% of the people of Oregon, then we would have the money needed to help our foster children, and so much more. Those who resist common sense and science, are willing to pay a very big price, which is being paid by the poor, children, foster children and the underserved. Lets dump this program and get back to helping Oregonians, like these foster children, who need more support.
