Not only does this make it harder and more expensive for oregon citizens to exercise our rights. It opens up a new avenue in which the government gets to decide who and who not is allowed their freedoms.

Gun control historically - like many laws - has disproportionately targeted and affected marginalized groups and gives law enforcement another vector in which to persecute and have control over those they disagree with.

It also makes it clear that the state believes law enforcement deserves to have more rights than regular citizens creating a de factor caste system in Oregon in which police officers have more rights than others.
